Indian textile market is the second largest in the world and is exploding with opportunity and is hungry for technology, machinery and joint venture partners to enable them meet the market demand. The opportunities in the Indian domestic market are fueled by developing rural market, increased purchasing power and growing export market. It is expected that the Indian textile and apparel industry will grow 11%, home textile market 9% and technical textile industry 11% in the coming years. India's demand for machinery is increasing for spinning machines, textile finishing machinery, embroidery and garment machinery. The total demand of machinery is 2.22 billion US $ (2008) and the current import meets only 75% of the total demand.

Opportunity for the participants to explore joint venture, business collaboration, technology transfer and investment is huge especially for foreign participants and Research Institutes who have now technology for commercialization. Around 33% of the TEI in India are willing to upgrade/modernize their current capacities and desire to expand their production capacity, building and infrastructure, procuring new machines and exploring product diversification. These units have enrolled investments worth Rs.641 Cr. towards modernization/expansion.

As such, there is a great opportunity and India ITME 2012 is a much awaited and spectacular event showcasing hi-tech machinery, innovative technology and accessories and services related to textile engineering sector and is the "gateway event" to a vast market opportunity.
